Today is just like how every other day has been really for the past two weeks. Everything really just down about two weeks ago due to COVID-19. If you do not know what COVID-19 is by now you've basically been living under a rock. Anyways, it is a virus that has really affected the whole world. We are in a pandemic lol. Not that any of it is funny because it is most certainly not, but it's crazy to think that we are living through a pandemic right now.

Today I didn't do much, as if there is a lot to do nowadays. I rode bikes on the trail with my roommates, though it is advised against being outside, but sitting inside the house all day is really boring. You never know how much you appreciate something until you no longer have it. Social media has become like a best friend to me considering that's all the entertainment I can have right now.

Today was like any other day just sitting around the house doing nothing. I went fishing though for like the first time in I don't know how long. I forgot to mention when COVID-19 first began to be a problem people were buying toilet paper, like all of the toilet paper which is really confusing. Like you know when its supposed to snow or something and your going to be stuck in the house most people buy milk and bread and food that they know won't go bad. But today in our world people are buying toilet paper and buying all of it.

Today I also got an email saying that we had to move out of our housing due to COVID-19. I can't lie when I got the e-mail, I was beyond mad thinking how can they make us all move out of our housing during a time like this. Then I really started to think about it and JSU was only trying to do what was best for everyone. It really sucked though because now I have to move back in with my parents which is a bummer.

I moved out of my apartment today. Sad day but it had to be done. My family came to help me move out and the minute they got there I already knew how the next, I don't know long, was going to go. You know when you're away from home for college or a long period of time you start to get used to be on your own. Now I have to move back in with my parents and follow their rules. I am used to being alone following my own rules, man how times have changed.

It is so weird not having any of your favorite restaurants open. Yes, I know we are in a pandemic where outside is not safe, I shouldn't be thinking about going anywhere but you get tired of cooking. But anyways I am home with my parents lets see how the time here goes.

Its so different being home with your family especially your younger sibling. You get annoyed quick and you want to be alone. I miss my friends all the time being away from them, but we have this thing we have to go by called 'social distancing' where we should distant while being social with other people.

I me and my best friend found us an apartment from impulse buying. We are so tired of living with our families we just want to get back to being on our own. My parents don't agree they don't think it safe for me to be doing these things, but it has to happen.

I got my job back today. Its nice to be doing something you did while things weren't like this. It makes you think things are getting better, but they aren't and the governor of Georgia, where I am from, keeps trying to open things up when its is still unsafe to go outside. But its nice to know you can make some money also because COVID-19 took that from most of us.

I missed my friends from work. It was nice to see them and nice to actually conversate with some one other than your family or through the phone. Crazy to say but I actually missed my bosses. That's going to be hard to say in a few weeks when everything is back to normal.

I discussed some things that went on in my life during COVID-19. The time period I discussed is over a few weeks. At first, I was in Jacksonville, Alabama now I am in Georgia. I am a third-year student at JSU. My major is Nursing.
