Summer Session 1950

The summer session, which has grown to be an important factor in modern education, is of co-ordinate rank with the other quarters of the scholastic year. It is designed primarily for the following purposes:

1. To provide courses leading to securing, extending, or renewing teacher certificates in both the elementary and secondary fields.
2. To provide opportunities for teachers to work toward college graduation.
3. To enable high-school graduates to begin their college work without having to wait for the fall quarter.
4. To provide practical workshop experience for teachers in the elementary school.

The summer workshop is organized in such a way as to bear a high degree of relationship with the programs of the local school systems. The local school supervisors are consulted in planning the workshop, and they frequently assist in directing the program.

Laboratory Schools

The Teachers College maintains a training school in which its students in training are given experience in the application of the principles taught them in college classes. No student will be permitted to graduate with a degree in education who has not completed at least ninety clock hours of satisfactory teaching in the training schools under the supervision and direction of laboratory school supervisors.

The training schools will open June 12, the elementary running for only six weeks, and the high school running for only eight weeks.

Pre-Legal Courses

Adviser: Head of Department of Political Science.

The majority of accredited schools of law offer three plans of study for the post-war period: (a) the two-four plan; (b) the three-three plan and (c) the four-three plan.

The latter plan (c) is recommended most strongly by law-school faculties and by leaders in the profession. It consists in securing a bachelor of arts degree with the broad emphasis on the field of the social sciences. This will admit to any member of the Association of American Law Schools. The prospective law student should consult the faculty adviser in order to plan the best sequence of courses. His course should include: English (two years), European, American and English History, Political Science, Introductory Economics and Accounting. A major in Political Science is recommended.

Plan (a) consists of two full years of pre-law work similar to that outlined above. This admits to the four-year curriculum in the standard law school leading to the degree of B. S. in Law and Ll. B.

Plan (b), the "combined course", comprises a three-year pre-law curriculum in which the requirements for a major may be taken and the three-year course in a standard law school leading to the Ll.B. degree. The B. A. degree may be conferred by this college after the end of the first year of law if and when local requirements have been satisfied.

R.O.T.C. is required of all male students in regular session only. Not offered in summer school.
