Josephine dearest,

I can't imagine what has happened to you and I can't leave without a line of goodbye and my deep and true loving good wishes for you and yours this evening. We sail on Friday on the "Pennland"

Red Star Line from New York. Please send me a message to the boat and tell me that you are all right. Are you making me suffer for my sins? I know I am rotten about letters but you get more than anyone except Bee and surely you know how I always feel about you. We leave for New York tomorrow night. Bee is coming over to be with us until we sail. I hate to leave Oscar here working all summer, he has to be dashing about for the school, but thank goodness both children will be with me and that is a comfort. I got out my travelling portfolio a few minutes ago and found mother's letter telling me about Mary's appendicitis operation, it did make me feel so queer. How I will miss mother's letters, please be good and write to me.

Goodbye darling. God bless you. My love to Carl and a big heart full for you my dear sweat precious Josephine.

Devotedly always

Alice

One thing makes the years its pedestal,
Springs from the ashes of its pyre and claps
A skyward wing above its epitaph-
The will of man willing immortal things.
The ages are but baubles hung upon the threads of some strong lives – and one slight wrist
May lift a century above the dust.
